

Pathway to becoming an Accountant

1. Accounting Technicians Ireland | Apprenticeship: THE BENEFITS

Accountancy as a profession requires on-going learning and first-hand experience, making Apprenticeships a very fitting option for those entering the industry or looking to develop. Apprenticeships are fundamentally about combining working, learning, and earning, making them an attractive combination for young people, graduates and career changers. Accountancy apprentices gain sufficient knowledge, skills and behaviour, equipping them to become experts and assets to any business or organisation.

With the costs of going to third level education increasing, the Accounting Technician Apprenticeship is a great way to balance getting professional training while earning money.

Why KBG?

It's not all about technical excellence, for a firm like KBG, people skills and building relationships are key.

KBG is expanding quickly and has big ambitions which means there are great opportunities available and a wide variety of work.

We have a strong emphasis on client contact and care, staff work hard to build an in depth understanding of client needs to ensure that advice given is tailored and relevant. Combined with some top-level specialists we can offer client service to be proud of.

At the same time, we are small enough for each individual to be key to our success.

Partners work closely supporting staff. We are keen to share knowledge and experience to ensure people of all levels get involved with clients and build their own relationships. Hard work and a good attitude get recognised and rewarded; everyone has their own level of aspiration which the firm supports.

If this sounds like an environment where you can flourish, please email your CV to recruitment@kbg.ie
